A global classification of Bonnet surfaces is given using both ingredients of the theory of Painlev equations: the theory of isomonodromic deformation and the Painlev property. The book is illustrated by plots of surfaces. It is intended to be used by mathematicians and graduate students interested in differential geometry and Painlev equations. Researchers working in one of these areas can become familiar with another relevant branch of mathematics.

theory is controlled by the geometry of certain rational surfaces called the spaces of initial values. This framework gives a systematic description of the equations, symmetries, special solutions, Lax pairs and so forth. The aim of this paper is to provide a comprehensive review on the current status of achievements in the geometric aspects of the Painleve equations so as to serve it as a Jacobi's three elliptic functions, too, satisfy a first order system of differential equations. that single out the solution. (These equations are essentially the same as the equations of motion of the Euler-Poinsot rigid body). Unlike the hypergeometric functions etc., however, these differential equations are nonlinear.
