Urban Stormwater Management in the United States

agricultural land to suburban and urban areas is proceeding at an unprecedented pace in the United States. Stormwater discharges have emerged as a problem because the flow of water is dramatically altered as land is urbanized. Typically, vegetation and topsoil are removed to make way for buildings, roads, and other infrastructure, and drainage networks are installed. The loss of the water

Urban Agriculture Michigan State University

Urban Agriculture Urban agriculture is a global and growing pursuit that can contribute to economic development, job creation, food security, and community building. It can, however, be limited by competition for space with other forms of urban development, a lack of formalized land use rights, and health hazards related to food contamination.
